When I open Google Maps (f.e. in the "Maps" app) on android, the map opens in the top-left corner of the screen. How can I force it to open in the top-right corner? A: This is an unfortunate limitation of the Google Maps Android app. You cannot control this from within the app itself. Unfortunately, Google Play seems to have no control over the settings for individual applications and developers have to go to the Settings app. You can find the same area of the Settings app here: When the app is installed, this area of the app is selected as the "Current package". If you wish to change this, you would need to delete the app, download it again, and select the "Settings" area of the Settings app. This area is self-explanatory and you can select the "Current package" here. The easiest way to solve this would be to install a different app that has a better implementation. There are many alternative apps that will not have this limitation f678ea9f9e
